

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

LATIN hymns appeal to students on many grounds. Some appreciate the poetry, some the religious character, and a few the theological learning; while to others the changes in the language and the development in metrical treatment and versification prove attractive. Others, still, are interested in medieval thought and in literary history. Many of these hymns have exercised such wide influence that an acquaintance with them would seem to be desirable for broad literary culture, if for no other reason.

The best results have been gained by encouraging students. to sing the hymns in the original and to hunt up English metrical versions and musical settings. Literal translation and close philological treatment should not be encouraged.

In the preparation of the Introduction and Notes the editor would acknowledge his great indebtedness to Julian's "Dictionary of Hymnology."

INTRODUCTION

A HYMN, according to ancient canons, must consist of praise to God or his saints, must be metrical, and must be capable of being sung. The word is of Greek origin, and there are references to hymns in both the Old (e.g. Isaiah xlii 10) and in the New (e.g. Act. Apost. v 25) Testaments; it is probable that from the beginning of the Christian church they were used in public worship, for Pliny in his famous letter to Trajan (Ep. 97) and Tertullian (Apol. 2) imply their use. There was early a minor order of the clergy, called Psaltae or Cantores, whose duty it was to lead the singing which was often antiphonal. What was the exact distinction between psalms and hymns and spiritual songs (Coloss. iii 16) is not known; it is, however, remarkable that in the Greek church, even at the present day, there are no metrical hymns, all of them being rhythmic and accentual.

Christianity is an Oriental religion, and came to the West through Greek influence; it is, therefore, natural that Greek precedent should preponderate in ritual as well as in theology; and undoubtedly the use of hymns was due to Greek authority. One of the earliest was the  $\Delta \acute{o}\xi a$   $\acute{e}\nu$   $\acute{v}\psi\acute{u}\sigma \iota \iota \iota s$ —the Gloria in Excelsis; and the Te Deum Laudantus has a Greek kernel. The various hymns of the church service, those consisting of verbal quotations from the Bible as well as the Gloria Patri, the Tersanctus, and the like, were of Greek, when not of Hebrew, origin; and, indeed, they were long sung in Greek even in Latin countries. Latin hymnody begins with Hilary) of Poictiers, who acknowledges that he brought some of his hymns from the East, and Ambrose, the great bishop of Milan in the fourth century, in establishing a definite form for Latin hymns, avowedly followed the custom of the East.

About a hundred hymns are attributed to Ambrose and his In style they are objective; they are simple and rugged, intended for daily use hymns of praise and prayer for guidance and help. The prevailing metre is the iambic dimeter, - the English Long Metre which still continues Ambrosian tradition in the character of the hymns which it frames, but with little regard for classical quantities. Alcaics and Sapphics with an occasional dactylic rhythm are exceptionally used in religious poems, but for congregational singing the iambic proved to be the measure best fitted to the genius of the Latin language and to the popular taste. As a means of inculcating orthodox doctrine hymns were found to be of the greatest value; and the example had already been given by heretics, both in the East and in the West, who had demonstrated their efficiency in conveying error. These hymns were incorporated into the Ambrosian breviary, and were also adopted by Benedict for the use of his order of monks, being selected and appointed for the various occasions of the day and season; they became widely known, and even at the present day the hymns of the canonical hours and the monastic services are still Ambrosian.

From the fourth to the eleventh century there was not much change in subject-matter and style. The objective character still remained; the metrical treatment tended more and more to the purely accentual instead of the quantitative; and the vocabulary and syntax, while showing plainly the increasing remoteness of the Augustan age, are yet remarkably pure in comparison with the prose of the same period. The Bible in its Latin form was the principal source of the hymn writers, and whatever objection may be made to the Vulgate on the ground of rhythm and word order, so markedly different from the Ciceronian flow, it cannot be denied that its Latin shows an energetic vigor and lively force that harmonize well with the power of the new and victorious religion which adopted its Latinity as peculiarly its own. The prominent names in this second period are Prudentius, Sedulius, Sidonius Apollinaris, Juvencus, Venantius Fortunatus, Gregory the Great, the Venerable Bede, Paul the Deacon, Theodulphus, Fulbert, Peter Damiani, closing with Bernard of Clairvaux. In this list are laymen as well as clergy of all orders, monks and seculars, popes, bishops, and deacons. Some, like Prudentius, were literary men purely, some were monastic scholars, some were citizens of the world, and some were contemplative poets. addition were many anonymous hymns rivalling in sweetness and beauty those attributed to definite authors; and even the authorship of some, which are connected with explicit names, is highly uncertain. These hymns are found in various places - in collected works of their supposed authors, in Graduals, Antiphonals, Breviaries, and other collections, and like the hymns in modern hymn-books, they were changed to suit the editors in many ways, - in length, in order, in words, and sometimes even in metre. The hymn was freely adapted to its intended use, there was little consideration of literary proprietorship, and authorship was a matter of no moment. In the eleventh and twelfth centuries Latin hymnody reflected plainly the change that had come over the church. The principal sacred poets were devout monks who, secluded from the world, gave themselves up to meditation and contemplation. Occupied with the life of the monastery, with its settled order of prayer and praise, poetic effort was certain to manifest itself in subjective outpourings of devotion and adoration, in meditative lyrics or in ecstatic dithyrambs, over the Christian promises and rewards. Hence devotional appeals to the Virgin and the saints became more numerous. Mone's second volume is given up entirely to hymns in honor of the former; and meditations on the Cross, on the joys of Paradise, on the sorrows and joys of the saints are increasingly frequent. And the staid, sober, iambic dimeter, was subordinated to trochaic and dactylic rhythms; bizarre effects were sought through alliteration, assonance, and intricate rhymes, for there was plenty of time in the monasteries for the poet to work out a verse scheme, no matter how difficult. The feeling for metrical quantity had quite passed away and rhyme was completely established. The favorite metre became the trochaic tetrameter, of course accentual, depending on the number of syllables, and aided by rhyme. This metre, often called Septenarius, from the number of its complete feet, was the foundation of stanzas of four and six verses, for the first half of the verse was detached and doubled, and likewise the second; and these elements were combined in manifold variety. For a clausula the second hemistich was taken, and the superb sequence metre of six lines was developed in Adam of S. Victor's:

"Heri mundus exultavit
Et exultans celebravit
Christi natalitia:
Heri chorus angelorum,
Prosecutus est caelorum
Regem cum laetitia."

The clausula being fixed and rhyming, various effects could be brought about by modifying the number of the other lines.

In the tenth and eleventh centuries a new form of hymn came into use, called variously prose, trope, or sequence. A trope was a general term for a versicle or strophe added to a chant; the prose was originally an unmetrical composition, as its name implies; and the sequence was metrical, and was originally so called because it followed the Alleluia in the Mass. Ultimately all three terms became synonymous. The sequence, as distinguished from the hymn, was used in the The Gradual was the anthem which followed the Epistle and preceded the Gospel in that service, and this closed with an Alleluia; the -ia of the word alleluia was prolonged through a musical jubilation on a certain number of notes, called neumes, and Notker of S. Gall, about A.D. 900. composed new words to accompany these notes. These Notkerian proses were not metrical, but rhythmical, with the most exact correspondence to the musical phrase of the neumes to which they owed their existence.

About the middle of the twelfth century the metrical sequence was perfected by Adam of S. Victor, and for centuries this form was the favorite one of sacred poetry. Hundreds were written and used all over northern Europe; they were less known in Italy, Spain, and southern France. They were often sung to popular airs; their subject-matter was as diverse as that of the hymns; and they were not limited to their original place in the Mass. The writers were Thomas Aquinas, Bonaventura, Iacobus de Benedictis, Thomas a Celano among others. More than seven hundred are known, the Dies Irae and Stabat Mater being most famous, and, finally, they became so numerous, and, unhappily, so poor in quality, that the Council of Trent, in the sixteenth century, reduced their number to four, for insertion in the Missal - the Victimae Paschali, Veni Sancte Spiritus, Lauda Sion, and Dies Irae and in 1727 to these the Stabat Mater was added.

During the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries numerous hymns were written, for the most part of unknown authorship. Hymns to the Trinity, for the holy seasons, for the saints and angels, and for the Virgin, were numerous; and some are not without merit, although the older and well-tested hymns still held their own. But as a whole, Latin hymnody had passed its period of highest development; and these later hymns lack the strength and rugged simplicity of those of earlier centuries. Some of them are mere condensations of the Nicene Creed, others are summaries of the life of Christ and of the saints; rhymed versions of the hours of the Passion; salutations to the Cross; to the face of Christ; versified accompaniments to the action of the Mass, in imitation of Thomas Aquinas; salutations beginning with "Ave"; and Psalters of Jesus. Many were meditations for private devotional use and not suitable for public worship, reflections on the vanity of earthly things and on the glories of the New Their great characteristic, differentiating them from the Ambrosian hymnody, is their subjective character; they deal with the personal relation of the writer to the topic of the hymn. This is particularly true in the great increase in the number of the hymns to the Virgin. To be sure, the Ave Maris Stella, Salve Regina, Ave Regina Caelorum, had been written before the fourteenth century; but the number of festivals in the Virgin's honor had constantly grown, - that of the Visitation being instituted in 1389, - and there was need for a whole cycle of hymns for her Conception, Nativity, Annunciation, and Assumption. More than a hundred begin with "Ave" and "Salve"; and those on the dolours and joys of Mary are numerous. The Stabat Mater is the best of all of them. Many of the older hymns were recast in her honor: there is a Te Deum Marianum, and Litanies of Mary. The great majority of these are fanciful and sentimental, and framed in strange varieties of metre, with acrostics, alliteration, or intricate rhyming schemes. A like development for the worse overtook the hymns to the saints; many are mere narratives of their lives and martyrdoms. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the effect of the revival of classical learning brought another influence to bear on the hymns, through the order of Pope Leo X, who commanded the revision of the hymns of the breviary, to meet the standard of classical writers and Ciceronian Latinity. This work was continued by order of Clement VII and Urban VIII, and to-day the noble hymns of Hilary and Ambrose stand in correct Latin, faultlessly cold, and often unrecognizable. The changes were so numerous that Wackernagel prints separately the breviary versions. The French and Spanish breviaries were similarly revised, and by 1736 the poems of contemporary writers — the Santeuils, Coffin, and others - were substituted in the Paris breviary, in many places, for the older work. At present the official hymnody of the Roman church is confined to the modernized hymns of the breviary, the five sequences of the missal, and a few hymns for the Benediction of the Sacrament.

The development of the Adamic sequence with its wealth of theological learning and recondite typology demanded some way of explanation for the intelligent understanding of the hymns. And from the fourteenth century numerous Expositiones Hymnorum et Sequentiarum were written, probably originally for use in schools for the training of the clergy. These expositions foreshadowed the great explanatory editions of the hymns by Daniel and Mone. Sometimes they were prose interlinear paraphrases of each line of the hymn; sometimes an analysis of the subject-matter with citations from the Bible. The Aurea Expositio Hymnorum by Hilary, edited at Paris in 1485, and the Elucidatorium Ecclesiasticum of Clichtoveus (1516) were the most famous.

The use of English translations of these Latin hymns in England and the United States is comparatively recent, and is one of the results of the Oxford movement led by Newman and Pusev. J. Chandler published a book of translations of "Hymns of the Primitive Church" in 1837, J. M. Neale his "Mediæval Hymns" in 1851, and R. Campbell his "Hymns and Anthems" in 1850. Caswell's "Lyra Catholica," 1849, contained one hundred and ninety-seven translations, and, during the latter half of the nineteenth century, several other collections of translations were published. In England many of these versions were included in a popular hymn-book called "Hymns, Ancient and Modern," and, as the hymnals of the various churches in this country were revised, the editors adopted the versions that had won acceptance in England. These translations are often the best commentary on the hymns; and, indeed, the ideal way to use these hymns is, first to read them aloud sympathetically in the Latin, secondly to sing them to the ancient melody, and thirdly to read the English metrical version with close comparison of the Latin.

HILARIUS

Hilary was made Bishop of Poictiers in 353 A.D., after having renounced paganism in 350; his zeal for orthodoxy won him the title Malleus Arianorum. His liber hymnorum has not survived, and the eight hymns attributed to him are of doubtful authenticity. Isidore of Seville says of him, "hymnorum carmine floruit primus" (Off. eccl. i 6). See Manitius 101; Kayser 52.

DAMASUS

Damasus was probably of Spanish origin; he became Pope in 366. Another hymn, for S. Andrew, is extant. He wrote many epigrams, most of which are lost. See Manitius 120; Kayser 104.

Damasus is said to have introduced the custom of singing the "Gloria" after the psalms (Kayser 92).

AMBROSIUS

S. Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, confessor and doctor, was born in 840. Among his voluminous writings are twelve hymns, ascribed to him by his Benedictine editors; ninety-two others written in his style are called Am-He introduced antiphonal chanting in the Western church, and began the systematic treatment of church music which was perfected by Gregory.

7. nostra supplex gloria, nos supplices.

AMBROSIANI

These hymns are of unknown authorship and are called Ambrosian because written in imitation of those by Ambrose.

Te Deum laudamus, te Dominum confitemur.

Te aeternum Patrem omnis terra veneratur.

Tibi omnes angeli, tibi caeli et universae potestates,

Tibi cherubim et seraphim incessabili voce proclamant:

Sanctus, sanctus, sanctus Dominus Deus Sabaoth!

Pleni sunt caeli et terra maiestatis gloriae tuae.

Te gloriosus apostolorum chorus, te prophetarum laudabilis numerus.

Te martyrum candidatus laudat exercitus;

Te per orbem terrarum sancta confitetur ecclesia,

Patrem immensae maiestatis,

Iudex crederis esse venturus! Te ergo quaesumus, tuis famulis subveni. Quos pretioso sanguine redemisti.

Aeterna fac cum sanctis tuis in gloria numerari.

Salvum fac populum tuum, Domine, et benedic hereditati tuae.

Et rege eos, et extolle illos usque in aeternum.

Per singulos dies benedicimus Te.

Et laudamus nomen tuum in saeculum et in saeculum saeculi.

Miserere nostri, Domine, miserere nostri;

Fiat misericordia tua, Domine, super nos,

Quemadmodum speravimus in Te.

In Te, Domine, speravi: non confundar in aeternum.

The TE DEUM is the most famous non-scriptural hymn of the Western church. It has been in use from the sixth century as a hymn for the Sunday service, before the lesson from the Gospel. The tradition ascribing it to Ambrose and Augustine at the baptism of the latter in 385 A.D. is traced to 859, and is probably to be rejected; but the hymn in its present form goes back to 400-450 A.D. As a Greek version of vss. 1-9 is extant, doubtless the germ of the hymn is Greek. See in general Julian, Dict. 1119 sq. Versions: prose, in Book of Common Prayer 8; metrical, N. Laud. D., 182, 277; In Exc. 170, 173; Meth. H. 10; Bapt. P. B. 169. Original melody in Young 269. Commentary by Kayser 435. mentary by Kayser 435

This is an Easter hymn, the Roman breviary version of Ad cenam Agni providi, which goes back to the seventh century. The original may be found in Migne's edition of Ambrose, or in Young 193. The hymn was specially used at Baptism on Easter Even, the candidates being dressed in white for the purpose; they were admitted to their first communion on the following Easter day. These robes were worn throughout the Easter octave, and the Sunday after Easter was anciently called Dominica in albis.

Metr. tr. in Episc. H. 118; N. Laud. D. 1075; In Exc. 676; Meth. H. 847; twenty-three translations have been made.

PRUDENTIUS

Aurelius Clemens Prudentius was born in Spain in 348 A.D. He became a lawyer and provincial governor, and finally a civil officer at Rome. In his fifty-seventh year he retired from active life to the writing of sacred poetry. His principal works are (1) Liber Cathemerinon (Christian Day), (2) L. Peristephanon (Martyrs' Garlands), (3) Apotheosis (Divinity of Christ), (4) Hamartigenia (Origin of Sin), (5) Psychomachia (Spiritual Combat). He is so conspicuous for his skill in lyric metres and in the dactylic hexameter with intended observation of the rules of classical versification, that Bentley styled him the Horace and Virgil of the Christians. There is much disagreement as to his merits: cf. Manitius 61; Kayser 249.

15

VENANTIUS FORTUNATUS

Venantius Fortunatus was born at Ceneda, near Treviso, in Italy about 530 and was educated at Ravenna. About 566 he made a pilgrimage to Tours to S. Martin's shrine, and spent the rest of his life in Gaul, becoming intimate with Queen Rhadegunda at Poictiers, where he was ordained, and finally became bishop about 597. He represents "the last expiring effort of the Latin muse in Gaul" in endeavoring to retain "the old classic culture amid the advancing tide of barbarism." His writings were numerous and varied, in both poetry and prose, including panegyrics of the nobles as well as Christian hymns. His life of S. Martin is his longest work. # GREGORIUS MAGNUS

Gregory the Great was born about 540, became Pope in 590, and was one of the four Doctors of the Latin church. His most important written works are his Morals, Homilies on Ezekiel and on the Gospels, and Sermons. He is most famous for his reform of the church liturgy and music in the Sacramentary, in which the form of the Mass was definitely fixed, and in his Antiphonary of chants. The Gregorian tones still in use with their grave monotones are a monument to his name. His "non Angli sed Angeli" of the British captives exposed in the slave market at Rome led to the Roman mission to the heathen Angles. In metrical treatment Gregory keeps to the rules of prosody, but allows hiatus occasionally; less often than in Ambrose there is opposition between word and verse accent. His use of Sapphics was perhaps due to the influence of Prudentius. See Manitius 384.

A hymn for early morning (Lauds), still in use.

Metr. tr. in N. Laud. D. 90; In Exc. 59. Original melody in Young 24.

Metre: Sapphic strophe, a metre as unfit for Christian hymns as classic architecture was for Christian churches. The genius of the new religion turned instinctively to new forms in art. In the time of the Renaissance some of the ancient hymns were revamped into Sapphics with dubious success.

2. Cf. Aurora Lucis Rutilat, p. 9. 7. pietate, goodness. The modern Roman breviary has bona sempiternae | munera pacis. 9. Deitas, for divinitas had been used by S. Augustine and Prudentius. 11. roboat, used by Virgil, but not by Horace.

BAEDA VENERABILIS

Bede was born in 672 near the Abbey of Yarrow where he spent his life as a student and scholar, becoming the great teacher of the Middle Ages through his works on theology, history, and chronology, and winning thereby the title "Venerable." From his book of hymns four have survived. —See Manitius 496.

Hymn for dedication of a church, probably of the seventh century. It is found in many medieval breviaries, with some textual variations. In the modern Roman breviary it begins "Coelestis urbs Jerusalem." See Julian, Dict. 1198.

Metr. tr. in Episc. H. 400; Laud. D. 929; In Exc. 779. Metre: trochaic tetrameter. The ruggedness is partly due to the date, partly to the unskilfulness of the author.

This single hymn for S. John Baptist is interesting, because Guido of Arezzo (995-1050) selected the initial syllables of the first stanza for the names of the tones of the musical scale. The seventh tone, si, represents the sof sancte and the i of Ioannes. The numerals in the European culture languages are obviously unfit for the purpose. In modern times do replaced ut. The hymn is still in use in the Roman breviary.

THEODULPHUS

S. Theodulph was Bishop of Orleans. It is said that on Palm Sunday in the year 821, Louis the Pious was at Angers, and as he passed in procession the place where Theodulph was confined, the latter sang this hymn for the first time, resulting in his liberation.

Gloria, laus et honor tibi sit, Et mortalis homo, cuncta crerex Christe redemptor,

NOTKERUS BALBULUS

Notker, a monk of S. Gall, was born about 840 and died in 912. His great importance in the history of ecclesiastical music is due to his invention of sequences. The word "alleluia" was sung at the close of the gradual between the epistle and gospel in the Mass, and it was customary to prolong the final syllable -ia through varied cadences called neumes (from pneuma), until the officiating clergyman reached the place where the gospel was to be read. Notker invented words, and sometimes music also, to accompany these notes, and the result of his labors became technically known as sequences: sequentia dicta est qui pneuma iubili sequitur, Durandus. In form the Notkerian sequence is a rhythmical prose, something like the Hebrew psalms, whose form is strictly defined by the Neumes of the Alleluia, and of great musical intricacy. One hundred and fourteen of these sequences are known. See Julian 812, Bartsch, Sequenzen 1, and Introduction, p. ix.

This hymn for angels has been attributed on insufficient testimony to Hrabanus Maurus, pupil of Alcuin, Abbot of Fulda and Archbishop of Mainz, who died in 856. In the Roman breviary it is used for S. Michael's day and with some changes for S. Raphael's. The best known metrical translation is by Bp. Mant "Christ of thy angel host the Grace."

ABAELARDUS

Pierre Abelard was born in Brittany in 1079, married Heloise although a priest, was condemned for heresy in 1121 and 1140, and died in 1142. He was a philosopher and theologian and wrote over a hundred hymns. The most brilliant man of his age, his life was a shipwreck.

Ι

Mittit ad virginem non quemvis angelum, Sed Fortitudinem, suum archangelum, Amator hominis;

Fortem expediat pro nobis nuntium,

Natura faciat ut praeiudicium . 5

In partu virginis.

Naturam superat natus rex gloriae,
Regnat et imperat et zyma scoriae
Tollit de medio.

Superbientium terat fastigia, 10 Colla sublimium calcet vi propria, Potens in proelio.

Foras eiciat mundarum principem, Matremque faciat secum participem
Patris imperii. 15

Exi, qui mitteris, haec dona dicere,

Revela veteris velamen literae Virtute nuntii.

Accede, nuntia, dic "Ave" cominus,
Dic "plena gratia," dic "tecum Dominus,"

20
Et dic "ne timeas."

Virgo suscipias Dei depositum, In quo perficias casta propositum Et votum teneas.

PETRUS DAMIANI

Pietro Damiani, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia, Doctor, was born at Ravenna about 988. In 1041 he became Superior of the monks of the Holy Cross and founded five monasteries; his life was one of extraordinary asceticism. His friend Hildebrand, the Pope, he called his Holy Satan. He died in 1072.

Ad perennis vitae fontem mens sitivit arida;

Claustra carnis praesto frangi clausa quaerit anima:

Gliscit, ambit, eluctatur exul frui patria.

Dum pressuris ac aerumnis se gemit obnoxiam,

Quam amisit, dum deliquit, contemplatur gloriam, 5 Praesens malum auget boni perditi memoriam. Nam quis promat summae pacis quanta sit laetitia,

Ubi vivis margaritis surgunt aedificia,

Auro celsa micant tecta, radiant triclinia?

Solis gemmis pretiosis haec structura nectitur; 10

Auro mundo, tamquam vitro, urbis via sternitur;

Abest limus, deest fimus, lues nulla cernitur.

Hiems horrens, aestas torrens illic numquam saeviunt;

Flos perpetuus rosarum ver agit perpetuum;

Candent lilia, rubescit crocus, sudat balsamum. 15

Virent prata, vernant sata, rivi mellis influent:

Pigmentorum spirat odor, liquor et aromatum;

Pendent poma floridorum non lapsura nemorum.

Non alternat luna vices, sol, vel cursus siderum;

Agnus est felicis urbis lumen inocciduum; 20

Nox et tempus desunt ei, diem fert continuum.

Nam et sancti quique velut sol praeclarus rutilant;

Post triumphum coronati mutuo coniubilant,

Et prostrati pugnas hostis iam securi numerant.

Omni labe defaecati carnis bella nesciunt, 25

Caro facta spiritalis et mens unum sentiunt;

Pace multa perfruentes scandalum non perferunt.

Mutabilibus exuti repetunt originem,

Et praesentem veritatis contemplantur speciem,

Hinc vitalem vivi fontis hauriunt dulcedinem. 30

Inde statum semper idem existendi capiunt;

Clari, vividi, iucundi nullis patent casibus:

Absunt morbi semper sanis, senectus iuvenibus.

Hinc perenne tenent esse, nam transire transiit;

Inde virent, vigent, florent: corruptela corruit, 35

Immortalitatis vigor mortis ius absorbuit.

Qui Scientem cuncta sciunt, quid nescire nequeunt?

Nam et pectoris arcana penetrant alterutrum:

Unum volunt, unum nolunt, unitas est mentium.

Licet cuiquam sit diversum pro labore meritum, 40 Caritas hoe facit suum, quod.

dum amat alterum,

Proprium sic singulorum fit commune omnium.

Ubi corpus illic iure congregantur aquilae;

Quo cum angelis et sanctae recreantur animae,

Uno pane vivunt cives utriusque patriae. 45

Avidi et semper pleni quod habent desiderant;

Non satietas fastidit, neque fames cruciat:

Inhiantes semper edunt, et edentes inhiant.

Novas semper melodias vox meloda concrepat,

Et in iubilum prolata mulcent aures organa, 50

Digna, per quem sunt victores, regi dant praeconia.

Felix caeli quae praesentem regem cernit anima,

Et sub sede spectat alta orbis volvi machinam:

Solem, lunam et globosa cum planetis sidera!

Christe, palma bellatorum, hoc in municipium 55

Introduc me post solutum militare cingulum;

Fac consortem donativi beatorum civium!

Probes vires inexhausto laboranti proelio,

Nec quietem post procinctum deneges emerito,

Te que merear potiri sine fine praemio! 60

II

Gravi me terrore pulsas, vitae dies ultima;

Maeret cor, solvuntur renes, laesa tremunt viscera,

Tuam speciem dum sibi mens depingit anxia.

Quis enim pavendum illud explicet spectaculum,

Cum, dimenso vitae cursu, carnis aegra nexibus 5

Anima luctatur solvi, propinquans ad exitum?

Perit sensus, lingua riget, resolvuntur oculi,

Pectus palpitat, anhelat raucum guttur hominis,

Stupent membra, pallent ora, decor abit corporis:

Ecce diversorum partes confluent spirituum: 10

Hinc angelicae virtutes, illic turba daemonum.

Illi propius accedunt, quos invitat meritum.

Praesto sunt et cogitatus, verba, cursus, opera;

Et prae oculis nolentis glomerantur omnia:

Illuc tendat, huc se vertat, coram videt posita. 15

Torquet ipsa reum sinum mordax conscientia:

Plorat apta corrigendi defluxisse tempora:

Plena luctu caret fructu sera paenitentia.

Falsa tunc dulcedo carnis in amarum vertitur,

Quando brevem voluptatem perpes poena sequitur; 20 Iam quod magnum credebatur nil fuisse cernitur.

Atque mens in summae lucio gloriam sustollitur,

Aspernatur lutum carnis quo mersa persolvitur,

Et ut carcerati nexu laetabunda solvitur. Sed egressa durum iter experitur anima, 25 Qua incursant furiosa dirae pestis agmina,

Et diversa suis locis instruunt certamina.

Nam hic incentores gulae, illic avaritiae;

Alibi fautores irae, alibi superbiae:

Vitii cuiusque globus suas parat acies. 30

Iam si cedat una turma mox insurgit altera;

Omnis ars tentatur belli, omnis pugnae machina,

Ne ab hostium pudore sic evadat anima.

O quam torva bellatorum monstra sunt feralium;

Tetri, truces, truculenti, flammas efflant naribus; 35 Dracontea tument colla; virus stillant faucibus.

Serpentinis armant spiris manus doctas proeliis;

His oppugnant adventantes telis velut ferreis;

His quos attrahunt, aeternis mancipant incendiis.

Quaeso, Christe, Rex invicte, tu succurre misero. 40 Sub extrema mortis hora cum iussus abiero, Nullum in me ius tyranno praebeatur impio.

Cadat princeps tenebrarum, cadat pars tartarea.

Pastor, ovem iam redemptam tunc reduc ad patriam,

Ubi te vivendi causa perfruar in saecula.

PETRUS VENERABILIS

Peter the Venerable, or of S. Maurice, or of Cluny, was Abbot of Cluny in 1122. He was early in life a soldier, but afterwards became a Benedictine monk; his militant spirit made his life one of controversy. He died about 1156.

Mortis portis fractis, fortis Fortior vim sustulit: Et per crucem regem trucem Infernorum perculit. Lumen clarum tenebrarum Sedibus resplenduit; Dum salvare, recreare, Quod creavit, voluit. Resurrexit, et revexit Secum Deus hominem. Reparando quam creando Dederat originem. Per Auctoris passionem Ad amissam regionem Primus redit nunc colonus: Unde lactus fit hic sonus.

The hymn is for Easter.

Metre: trochaic dimeter with internal rhyme, alternating with trimeter dimeter catalectic with end rhyme. The Cluniacs were adepts at ingenious rhyming, thus breaking far away from the Ambrosian tradition.

BERNARDUS CLUNIACENSIS

Bernard of Morlaix was a monk of Cluny during the abbotship of Peter, to whom he dedicated his poem of three thousand lines on the Contempt of the World, from which the selection following was arranged by the Rev. J. M. Neale, D.D. It is one of the seven great hymns.

Hora novissima, tempora pessima sunt, vigilemus.

Ecce minaciter imminet arbiter ille supremus.

Imminet, imminet ut mala terminet, aequa coronet,

Recta remuneret, anxia liberet, aethera donet,

Auferat aspera duraque pondera mentis onustae,

Sobria muniat, improba puniat, utraque iuste.

HIC BREVE vivitur, hic breve plangitur, hic breve fletur;

Non breve vivere, non breve plangere retribuetur;

O retributio! stat brevis actio, vita perennis;

O retributio! caelica mansio stat lue plenis. 10 Spe modo vivitur, et Sion angitur a Babylone;

Nunc tribulatio; tunc recreatio, sceptra, coronae;

Tunc nova gloria pectora sobria clarificabit,

Solvet aenigmata, veraque sabbata continuabit.

Patria luminis, inscia turbinis, inscia litis,

Cive replebitur, amplificabitur Israelitis.

Pars mea Rex meus, in proprio Deus ipse decore

Visus amabitur, atque videbitur Auctor in ore.

O Bona patria, lumina sobria te speculantur,

Ad tua nomina sobria lumina collacrimantur: 20

Est tua mentio pectoris unctio, cura doloris,

Concipientibus aethera mentibus ignis amoris.

Tu locus unicus, illeque caelicus es paradisus,

Non ibi lacrima, sed placidissima gaudia, risus.

Est ibi consita laurus, et insita cedrus hysopo; 25

Sunt radiantia iaspide moenia, clara pyropo:

Hinc tibi sardius, inde topazius, hinc amethystus;

Est tua fabrica concio caelica, gemmaque Christus.

Tu sine littore, tu sine tempore, fons, modo rivus,

Dulce bonis sapis, estque tibi lapis undique vivus. 30

Est tibi laurea, dos datur aurea, Sponsa decora,

Primaque Principis oscula suscipis, inspicis ora:

Candida lilia, viva monilia sunt tibi, Sponsa,

Agnus adest tibi, Sponsus adest tibi, lux speciosa.

URBS SION AUREA, patria lactea, cive decora, 35

Omne cor obruis, omnibus obstruis et cor et ora.

Nescio, nescio, quae iubilatio, lux tibi qualis,

Quam socialia gaudia, gloria quam specialis.

Sunt Sion atria coniubilantia, martyre plena,

Cive micantia, Principe stantia, luce serena: 40

Est ibi pascua mitibus afflua praestita sanctis,

Regis ibi thronus, agminis et sonus est epulantis.

Gens duce splendida, concio candida vestibus albis

Sunt sine fletibus in Sion aedibus, aedibus almis.

Urbs sion inclyta, gloria debita glorificandis, 45

Tu bona visibus interioribus intima pandis:

Intima lumina, mentis acumina te speculantur,

Pectora flammea spe modo, postea sorte lucrantur.

Urbs Sion unica, mansio mystica, condita caelo,

Nunc tibi gaudeo, nunc mihi lugeo, tristor, anhelo: 50

Nemo retexere, nemoque promere sustinet ore,

Quo tua moenia, quo capitalia plena decore;

Opprimit omne cor ille tuus decor, O Sion, O pax,
Urbs sine tempore, nulla potest fore laus tibi mendax.
Urbs Sion inclyta, turris et edita littore tuto,
Te peto, te colo, te flagro, te volo, canto, saluto.
O bona patria, num tua gaudia teque videbo?

O bona patria, num tua praemia plena tenebo?
Dic mihi, flagito, verbaque reddito, dicque, Videbis:
Spem solidam gero; remne tenens ero? dic, Retinebis. 60
O sacer, O pius, O ter et amplius ille beatus,
Cui sua pars Deus: O miser,
O reus, hac viduatus.

This metre is called technically leonini cristati trilices dactylici. Other poems in the same metre are known, and translations imitating the measure have been made with dubious success. The ballad metre of Dr. Neale's translation has done much for the popularity of the English hymns taken from it.

BERNARDUS CLARAVELLENSIS

Bernard of Clairvaux (1091-1153), saint, abbot, doctor, was of noble origin, and with the fairest worldly prospects became a monk of Citeaux, then of Clairvaux, and finally an ecclesiastical statesman of the first rank. The hymns attributed to him are all of doubtful authenticity. See essay by Schaff in "Literature and Poetry," 232.

Clavos pedum, plagas duras, Et tam graves impressuras Circumplector cum affectu. Tuo pavens in aspectu, Meorum memor vulnerum. 15 Grates tantae caritati Nos agamus vulnerati: O amator peccatorum, Reparator constratorum O dulcis pater pauperum. 20

Quidquid est in me confractum, Dissipatum aut distractum, Dulcis Iesu, totum sana, Tu restaura, tu complana Tam pio medacamine. Te in tua cruce quaero, Prout queo, corde mero, Me sanabis, hic, ut spero. Sana me et sanus ero In tuo lavans sanguine.

Plagas tuas rubicundas Et fixuras tam profundas Cordi meo fac inscribi, Ut configar totus tibi Te modis amans omnibus. Quisquis huc ad te accessit Et hos pedes corde pressit Aeger, sanus hinc abscessit, Hinc relinquens quidquid ges-Dans osculum vulneribus.

Coram cruce procumbentem, Hosque pedes complectentem, Iesu bone, me ne spernas, Sed de cruce sancta cernas Compassionis gratia. 45 In hac cruce stans directe Vide me, O mi dilecte, Ad te totum me converte; "Esto sanus?" dic aperte, "Dimitto tibi omnia."

This is one (Ad pedes) of seven poems addressed to the separate members of Christ on the Cross; not certainly by Bernard. The poem has been used for purposes of private devotion rather than of public worship.

O miranda vanitas! O divitiarum Amor lamentabilis! O virus amarum!

Cur tot viros inficis Faciendo carum Quod pertransit citius Quam flamma stupparum. Homo miser, cogita:
Mors omnes compescit,
Quis est ab initio
Qui morti non cessit?
Quando moriturus est,
Omnis homo nescit,
Hic, qui vivit hodie,
Cras forte putrescit.

Dum de morte cogito,

Contristor et ploro,
Verum est, quod moriar
Et tempus ignoro.

Ultimum, quod nescio
Cui iungar choro;

Et cum sanctis merear
Iungi, Deum oro!

This song on the Vanity of the World is interesting as a link between the religious poetry of the Middle Ages and the boisterous student songs in the same metre (trochaic dimeter), many of which may be found in the Carmina Burana and in Gaudeamus.

HILDEBERTUS TURONENSIS

Hildebert was Bishop of Le Mans in 1097, Archbishop of Tours in 1125; died 1134. He was a prolific writer of Latin verse, most of which is of little value. This hymn is a selection from the address to the Holy Spirit in his poem on the Trinity. It has been translated by Thomas Crashaw and by Dr. Neale.

Me receptet Syon illa,
Syon, David urbs tranquilla,
Cuius faber auctor lucis,
Cuius portae lignum crucis,
Cuius muri lapis vivus,
Cuius custos rex festivus.
In hac urbe lux sollemnis,
Ver aeternum, pax perennis:
In hac odor implens caelos,
In hac semper festum melos; 10
Non est ibi corruptela,
Non defectus, non querela;

Non minuti, non deformes,
Omnes Christo sunt conformes.
Urbs caelestis, urbs beata, 15
Super petram collocata,
Urbs in portu satis tuto,
De longinquo te saluto,

De longinquo te saluto,
Te saluto, te suspiro,
Te affecto, te requiro.
Quantum tui gratulantur,
Quam festive convivantur,
Quis affectus eos stringat,

Aut quae gemma muros pingat,
Quis chalcedon, quis iacinthus,

Norunt illi qui sunt intus.

In plateis huius urbis, Sociatus piis turbis, Cum Moyse et Elia, Pium cantem Alleluia. Amen.

ADAM DE S. VICTORE

Adam was educated at Paris and became a monk of the abbey of St. Victor, where he spent his life, dying between 1172-1192. He was the most prolific of medieval hymn writers, one hundred and six of his compositions being known. His work shows remarkable erudition in mystical interpretation of Scripture, and his versification is smooth and pleasing; he developed the sequence into its final and perfect form.

INNOCENT III

Innocent was born about 1160, and through the influence of the powerful Conti family, which furnished nine Popes, he received rapid promotion, and on the death of Celestine III in 1198 was made Pope. He died in 1216. His name is connected with several hymns whose authorship is uncertain.

The Golden Sequence, one of the seven great hymns, and still in use in the Roman missal as the sequence for Whitsunday. Trench calls it the loveliest of all the hymns. The authorship is uncertain: it has been ascribed to Robert II of France, to Hermannus Contractus, and to Stephen Langton, as well as to Innocent. The earliest Ms. is of the thirteenth century. See Julian, 1213.

BONAVENTURA

Bonaventura, the seraphic doctor, was born in Tuscany in 1221. He was professor of theology in the University of Paris, general of the Franciscan order, and cardinal bishop. He died in 1274. This hymn on the Cross is the only certain one of his composition.

THOMAS AQUINAS

Thomas Aquinas, doctor angelicus, confessor, the great Dominican, was born about 1227, of noble origin. He was professor of theology at Paris and general of his order. His theological works are esteemed of surpassing value and influence in the Roman communion. He died in 1274. His best-known hymns relate to the doctrine of transubstantiation, and were written in 1263 for the festival of Corpus Christi.

Dogma datur Christianis,
Quod in carnem transit panis,
Et vinum in sanguinem:
Quod non capis, quod non

Animosa firmat fides.

Animosa firmat fides, Praeter rerum ordinem.

Sub diversis speciebus,
Signis tamen et non rebus,

Manet tamen Christus totus
Sub utraque specie.

A sumente non concisus,
Non confractus, non divisus,
Integer accipitur:
Sumit unus, sumunt mille,
Quantum isti, tantum ille,
Nec sumptus consumitur.

Sumunt boni, sumunt mali,
Sorte tamen inaequali 50
Vitae, vel interitus:
Mors est malis, vita bonis:

Quam sit dispar exitus!

Fracto demum Sacramento 55
Ne vacilles, sed memento

Ecce, Panis angelorum
Factus cibus viatorum,
Vere panis filiorum,
Non mittendus canibus;
In figuris praesignatur,
Cum Isaac immolatur,
Agnus paschae deputatur,
Datur manna patribus.

Bone pastor, panis vere,

Tu nos pasce, nos tuere,
Tu nos bona fac videre
In terra viventium.
Tu qui cuncta seis et vales,
Qui nos pascis hic mortales,

Cohaeredes et sodales
Fac sanctorum civium.

Little is known of Thomas of Celano except that he was a Franciscan monk and became custos of the Franciscan convents on the Rhine before 1230. His authorship of the hymn is not certain, but highly probable.

Dies irae, dies illa Solvet saeclum in favilla, Teste David cum Sibylla. Quantus tremor est futurus, Quando iudex est venturus, 5 Cuncta stricte discussurus! Tuba, mirum spargens sonum Per sepulcra regionum, Coget omnes ante thronum. Mors stupebit, et natura, 10 Cum resurget creatura Iudicanti responsura. Liber scriptus proferetur, In quo totum continetur. Unde mundus judicetur. 15 Iudex ergo cum sedebit, Lacrymosa dies illa, Qua resurget ex favilla Iudicandus homo reus: Huic ergo parce, Deus!

Pie Iesu domine, Dona eos requie! Amen. 55

The DIES IRAE by common consent is the most sublime of all Latin hymns. In ritual use it is the sequence for All Souls' Day and for requiem masses, but it was originally an Advent hymn. Its use in Goethe's "Faust" and Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel" is well known.

IACOBUS DE BENEDICTIS

Jacopone de Benedetti was born at Todi in Umbria, of noble origin, and after the violent death of his wife became a lay brother of the Order of S. Francis; he died in 1306. He was stultus propter Christum, as his epitaph states.

The STABAT MATER SPECIOSA is one of the seven great hymns, and is regarded as the most tender of all. Taken by itself it has a certain beauty, but on comparison with the STABAT MATER DOLOROSA it is seen to be but a feeble imitation. It is not certainly by Jacopone.

Ad Primam

Tu qui velatus facie Fuisti sol iustitiae, Flexis illusus genibus, Caesus quoque verberibus:

Te petimus attentius, Ut sis nobis propitius, Ut per tuam elementiam Perducas nos ad gloriam.

Ad Tertiam

Hora qui ductus tertia Fuisti ad supplicia, Christe, ferendo humeris Crucem pro nobis miseris:

Fac nos sic te diligere Sanctamque vitam ducere, Ut mereamur requie Frui caelestis patriae.

Ad Sextam

Crucem pro nobis subiit Et stans in illa sitiit Iesus sacratis manibus Clavis fossus et pedibus: Honor et benedictio Sit crucifixo Domino, Qui suo nos supplicio Redemit ab exitio.

Ad Nonam

Beata Christi passio 25
Sit nostra liberatio,
Ut per hanc nobis gaudia
Parata sint caelestia.
Gloria Christo domino,
Qui pendens in patibulo 30
Clamans emisit spiritum
Mundumque salvans perditum.

Ad Completorium

Qui iacuisti mortuus
In pace rex innocuus,
Fac nos in te quiescere
Semperque laudes canere.
Succurre nobis, Domine,
Quos redemisti sanguine,
Et duc nos ad suavia
Aeternae pacis gaudia.

THE STUDENTS' SERIÉS OF LATIN CLASSICS.

UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

ERNEST MONDELL PEASE, A.M.,

Late Leland Stanford Junior University,

AND

HARRY THURSTON PECK, Ph.D., L.H.D., Columbia University.

This Series contains the Latin authors usually read in American schools and colleges, and also others well adapted to class-room use, but not heretofore published in suitable editions. The several volumes are prepared by special editors, who aim to revise the text carefully and to edit it in the most serviceable manner. Where there are German editions of unusual merit, representing years of special study under the most favorable circumstances, these are used, with the consent of the foreign editor, as a basis for the American edition. In this way it is possible to bring out text-books of the highest excellence in a comparatively short period of time.

The editions are of two kinds, conforming to the different methods of studying Latin in our best institutions. Some contain in the introductions and commentary such a careful and minute treatment of the author's life, language, and style as to afford the means for a thorough appreciation of the author and his place in Latin literature. Others aim merely to assist the student to a good reading knowledge of the author, and have only the text and brief explanatory notes at the bottom of each page. The latter are particularly acceptable for sight reading, and for rapid reading after the minute study of an author or period in one of the fuller. editions. For instance, after a class has read a play or two of Plautus and Terence carefully, with special reference to the peculiarities of style, language, metres, the methods of presenting a play, and the like, these editions will be admirably suited for the rapid reading of other plays.

The Series also contains various supplementary works prepared by competent scholars. Every effort is made to give the books a neat and attractive appearance.
